

Sammy Rane and Westbound — "Radio Underwater" live at the Whisky a Go Go

Stage direction and generation brief

This is the handoff for whoever is generating the clips. Read all of it before generating anything. The shot list at the bottom is the build order. Nothing in this document is optional unless it says so.

1. What this is

One song, 4:14, performed live start to finish by a four-piece rock band to a packed 500-cap club. It is filmed like a real live shoot, not a music video: two camera operators and the crowd's phones. The finished piece is a 2520x1080 cinemascope master and a 9:16 chorus cut.

The song is "Radio Underwater." It's a man describing the moment a woman walks into a bar and his hearing goes, and the fact that it keeps happening to him, and that he knows how it ends. It builds from a single spotlight to the whole room and back down to one bulb, then goes bigger than it's been for the last chorus and ends on a hard blackout.

The emotional rule: Sammy is not performing for the crowd. He's telling one person something. The crowd happens to be there. The band knows this and plays around him.

2. The room

Whisky a Go Go, Sunset Strip, Los Angeles. Headliner slot, the room is his.

- 500 capacity, packed. Low stage, about two feet off the floor. Red walls. A balcony rail wraps the room over the floor with people leaning on it.
- Light is practical and warm: a handful of par cans in red and amber, one follow spot from the back run by hand, the bar lit behind the crowd. No LED wall, no video screens, no pyro, no haze machines beyond a natural smoky look.
- The crowd: the front three rows are almost all women, 25 to 50, dressed for a night out, pressed against the stage lip with drinks up. Men further back and along the bar and on the balcony. Phones come up from the second verse on. Nobody is on shoulders, nobody crowd-surfs. Twice, the front row touches him.
- If the Whisky sign or marquee appears, it appears as a real venue would: small, in the background, never centered, never the subject.

3. The band and where they stand

Stage geography never changes. Every wide shot must respect it.

Position	Who	Element ID	What they do
Center, one mic stand	Sammy Rane , lead vocal	321579083316994	No guitar, ever. Mic on the stand for verses and the bridge, mic in his hand for choruses. Cream henley, leather cords. Sweat builds from chorus 1, hair damp by chorus 3.
Stage left, half a step behind Sammy	Cass , lead guitar	321579119314540	Electric guitar. Laid back the whole set, then owns the solo. Smiles at Sammy once (shot 15). Shares Sammy's mic on chorus 2 (shot 23). Watches him walk off (shot 39).
Stage right, own mic	Rex , bass and harmony	321579119658138	Head down, never looks at the camera. Black leather jacket, red tee, shades on all night. Sings the harmony on "Her scent was running farther" and covers "Damn, a smile."
Back, against the red wall	Max , drums	321579118663154	Black kit. Black cap, red hair, red beard, tattooed arms. Stands up for the ending.

Four people. There is no fifth musician. Do not add keys, sax, backing singers or a second guitarist.

Element binding rule: bind only the Elements who are actually in the frame. A Sammy close-up binds Sammy only. A wide binds all four. Never bind an Element to a shot where that person isn't visible; it pulls them into the frame.

4. Light states (the edit follows these)

Section	Time	State
Intro	0:00–0:14	Stage dark. Bar lit behind the crowd. One red par on the back wall.
Verses	0:14–0:59, 1:36–2:10	Follow spot on Sammy only, amber. Band are shapes in the spill. Front row faces lit by spill.
Choruses 1 & 2	0:59–1:32, 2:10–2:43	Every par on, red and amber. Whole room warm and visible.
Solo	2:43–2:55	Spot swings off Sammy onto Cass. Sammy stands in the dark, back to the room.
Bridge	2:55–3:16	Every par off. One small white bulb over the mic. Bar lights only behind the heads.
Drop	3:16–3:19	Black stage. Bar lights.
Chorus 3	3:19–3:40	Everything on, whitest it gets, bar bulbs pulsing with the kick.
Outro	3:40–3:54	Still full, but the camera goes tight and it feels smaller.
Ending	3:54–4:06	Pars flash on each hit. Hard black on the last one.
Out	4:06–4:14	Bar lights only. Room screaming.

The two big lighting hits in the song are on the word "underwater" at 0:55 and 2:04: the room goes from one spot to everything on that word. Shots 10 and 22 are built around it.

5. Camera

Two operators and the crowd.

- Crowd cam: handheld, in the audience, has to push through shoulders. Low angles, heads and hands in the bottom of frame, motion blur. Most of the Sammy close-ups come from here.
- Side cam: longer lens from the wings, stage left or right. Profiles, the band, Max, the crowd seen past the players.
- Phone inserts: 9:16, grainy, someone's arm in frame. Two of them (shots 8 and 26).
- Back bar: the crowd cam operator standing on something at the bar, shooting over the whole room to the stage. Used for the two light hits and the bridge wide.

Look: 35mm film feel, warm tungsten, grain, real motion blur. Never clean, never digital-sharp, never a music video crane move. Nobody on stage looks at the camera except where the shot list says so.

6. Generation settings

- Model: kling-video-v3_0_omni, image_to_video with Elements bound.
- Aspect: 16:9. Resolution: 1080p. The 2520x1080 master is cropped from 16:9 in the edit (about 12% off top and bottom), so every prompt asks for headroom above the head.
- Phone inserts (8, 26): generate 9:16.
- Duration: per shot in the table, 4 to 12 seconds. Generate the length listed; the edit trims.
- Native audio: off. All sound comes from the song master.
- Reference Elements in the prompt as <<<ID>>> and pass them in the elements array with a bindName.
- Run shots 12, 23, 33 and 38 at two variations each for coverage. Everything else one take, retake only if the face breaks or the geography is wrong.

Prompt skeleton every shot is built from:

Live show at the Whisky a Go Go, packed small club, low stage, red walls, balcony rail with people leaning over, long lit bar at the back, [LIGHT STATE]. [CAMERA] of <<<ID>>> [ACTION], [band and crowd]. Front rows mostly women pressed against the stage lip, drinks raised. Handheld documentary live-shoot feel, 35mm film, grain, motion blur in the crowd, headroom above the head. No text, no logos.

7. Lip sync

13 shots are Sammy singing close enough that the mouth has to match. Those are marked LIP. Generate them silent, then run Kling Lip Sync in the app using the audio file named for that shot (shotNN_TIMES.mp3, each is the exact song segment with a half-second lead-in). Everything else does not need sync: wides, band, crowd, hands, backs of heads. On non-LIP shots where Sammy is singing in a medium or wide, "mouth moving, singing" in the prompt is enough.

8. Deliverables back to the editor

- One mp4 per shot, named shotNN.mp4 (shot16.mp4). Variations: shot12a.mp4, shot12b.mp4.
- LIP shots delivered after Lip Sync, named shotNN_sync.mp4.
- Don't trim, don't grade, don't add sound. The edit does all of it on the song master.

9. Build order

Shot 16 first. It's the hook, it's a LIP close-up, and it tells us whether the Sammy face holds under red light with the crowd that close. Generate it, Lip Sync it, send it. Wait for the editor's yes before running the other 38.

Then: all Sammy LIP close-ups (4, 6, 9, 12, 19, 21, 25, 28, 30, 33, 35, 37), because they're the shots most likely to need retakes. Then the wides (2, 10, 18, 22, 29, 32, 38, 39). Then band and crowd.

10. Shot list

Song timings are from the recorded master. "Who" is who gets bound. Kling s is the generation length.
