

TRE OFF GREENWICH — teaser shot list v1

About 60 s, 2520x1080. Music: the master from 1:18.0 (four seconds of quiet lead-in), hard cut at 2:12.0 on "company," exact frame to be confirmed on the waveform before lock. Two voices: Tre at the top, Sammy at the bottom. Nobody else speaks.

This one has no peak. The music barely moves for fifty seconds and the picture shouldn't either. The whole teaser is a phone that doesn't ring. Long holds, almost no camera movement, one big cut in the middle (the ten years) and one at the end (to black).

Two Sammys: THEN (38, New York, still drinking, dark beard) and NOW (48, on tour, seven years sober, gray in it). Tre's face is seen once, in the first four seconds, and never again.

teaser	lyric (song time)	picture
0:00	lead-in, quiet (1:18)	Inside a car, night, West Side Highway. TRE in the passenger seat, green eyes, that smile, points out the window at a building going past. TRE: "Boys like you don't get to make it last." SAMMY THEN, driving, doesn't look at the building or at her. Hand on her thigh.
0:04	"A wedding pulled her north for a weekend" (1:22)	Greenwich Street, morning. Tre from behind, weekend bag over her shoulder, getting into a cab. She turns back and gives a small wave up to a window. Ordinary. Not a goodbye.
0:09	(instrumental)	Sammy THEN in the walk-up window above, coffee, watching the cab go. Cut to the kitchen behind him: two mugs on the counter. One is clean.
0:14	"The phone went quiet, then it went black" (1:32)	A bar, that night. Sammy THEN with a full glass, and this time he drinks it. His phone face-up on the bar, screen lit: TRE, calling out. Rings. Rings. Screen goes dark. He pours another.
0:21	"Morning didn't say much, didn't have to" (1:39)	Dawn through the walk-up window. Sammy THEN asleep in his clothes on the couch, phone dark on his chest. Nothing moves but the light.
0:26	"And the next ten years never gave her back" (1:44)	MATCH CUT on the body: same pose, same angle, different room. Sammy NOW on a hotel bed, boots on, gray in the beard, phone dark on his chest. Ten years in one cut. Hold.
0:30	"I quit the bottle, but I didn't quit her" (1:48)	Hotel bar, later. A whiskey in front of Sammy NOW. Full. His hand flat on the bar next to it. He doesn't touch it. (This is the glass from the bartender clip and from Mirror. It's becoming his signature; let it.)
0:36	"I traded one ghost for another" (1:54)	Hotel room, 2 AM. A woman asleep in the bed, face away from us, not Tre. Sammy NOW sitting on the edge of the bed with his back to her, phone in his hand, lighting his face.
0:38	"Typed her name at 2 a.m. last winter" (1:56)	Over his shoulder on the screen. Frost on the hotel window behind it. The To field: Tre. The message field: empty, cursor blinking. His thumb starts, stops, starts. We never read what he types.
0:42	"Hit send before the better angel could answer" (2:01)	Close on the thumb. It hits send. The little sound. "Delivered." His face doesn't change.

0:47	"Watched the screen go dark and stay that way" (2:05)	The screen dims on its own, then locks. Black glass. His face goes dark with it. HOLD. Three full seconds of nothing. This is the shot.
0:50	"Same silence I've been keeping company" (2:08)	Wide, static. The whole hotel room. Her asleep behind him. Him on the edge of the bed, phone face down on his knee now. Nobody moves.
0:54	HARD CUT (2:12.0)	Black. Silence. Half a second.
0:54.5		SAMMY NOW, dead-level, close: "Seven years. Still checking."
0:57		SAMMY RANE / "Tre off Greenwich" / coming soon. Hold 2.5 s. Black.

Why it's him

Every other woman in the catalog leaves through a door. Tre left through a phone, and he's been holding the phone ever since. The teaser never shows a breakup because there wasn't one. It shows a man who got sober and kept the one habit that mattered.

Rules this breaks, on purpose

- No stage at the end. The song has no peak in this window and putting him on stage would lie about that. Mirror broke the same rule; two in a row is a pattern, so the next one goes back to the stage.
- Sammy drinks on camera at 0:14. He's THEN, not NOW. It's the only teaser where he does, and it's there so the untouched glass at 0:30 means something.

Voices

- Tre `tre_lost_love` (EhRnO3ZUfGiqV4a8ooxF), one line, in the car, half a smile in it: "Boys like you don't get to make it last." Style 0.
- Sammy `sammy_rane` (9hxACPAP0PycObOZREHQ), one line, over black: "Seven years. Still checking." Style 0.

Frames needed before the shoot (Midjourney, then Kling Elements)

- Tre, mid-30s, passenger seat, night, green eyes, wide smile with too many teeth. One frame. She's never seen again, so it only has to be right once.
- Sammy THEN: 38, New York, dark beard, no gray, same jaw as the Sammy Element. Ages 0:00 through 0:21.
- Sammy NOW: the existing Element, gray in the beard. Ages 0:26 through 0:54.
- The couch pose and the hotel bed pose for the 0:21 / 0:26 match cut. Same body position, same lens height, both frames generated before either clip so the cut is exact.
- The phone screen at 0:38 and 0:42 is a composited insert, not Kling. I build it in the edit so the text is controllable.

Archive check

The bar, the pours, the hotel bed, the hotel bathroom exist in the archive but they're all Sammy NOW. THEN has to be new. The car interior may be adaptable from the Different View "girl's feet on dash" shot if it was ever generated; otherwise new.
